

What does remote learning look like at St Matthew's CE Primary?

The 'remote curriculum' is the broad term encompassing any learning that happens outside of the classroom, with the teacher not present in the same location as the children. The way in which our remote curriculum is delivered depends upon the type of closure, what content is being delivered and the age and stage of the children and will vary depending upon different circumstances. Online learning where the curriculum is delivered via technology such as Class Dojo and Microsoft Teams. This is mainly made up of 'live' lessons as well as some resources to support children's learning to complete online. Sign posting families to external apps and websites that would further support engagement in remote learning.

In the event of a school closure:

 Microsoft Teams	Teachers available from 8.30-3.30 live teaching/ responding to messages/ providing feedback. Live lessons taught daily sharing screens and providing safe links to video resources. Allowing pupil participation in lessons via chat if appropriate or through break out rooms. Creating personalised timetables for children to access their learning. Providing feedback on work and an opportunity to speak to pupils on a small group scale through the week. Contacting parents should children not be taking part in live lessons and remote learning and offer support if needed.
